

TRUST IN NEIGHBOURS

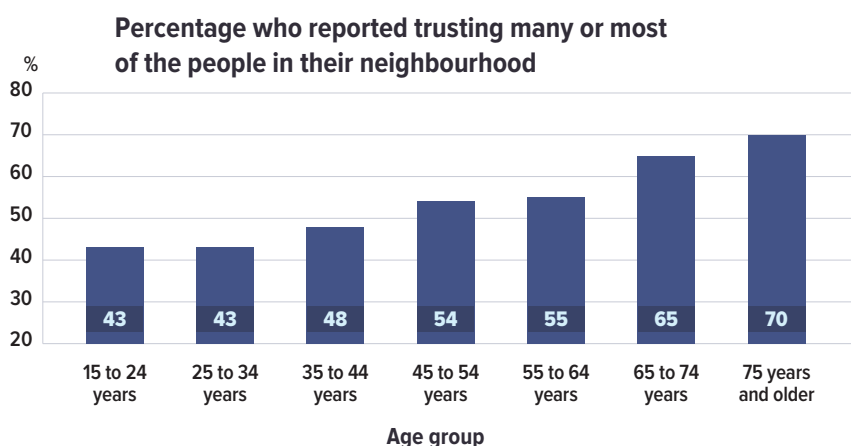

Trust in others is an indicator in the Quality of Life Framework. This infographic focuses specifically on trust in neighbours, based on responses¹ to the question "How many people do you trust in your neighbourhood?" from the Canadian Social Survey, which was conducted from April to June 2022.²

53% of people in Canada said that they trust many or most of the people in their neighbourhood

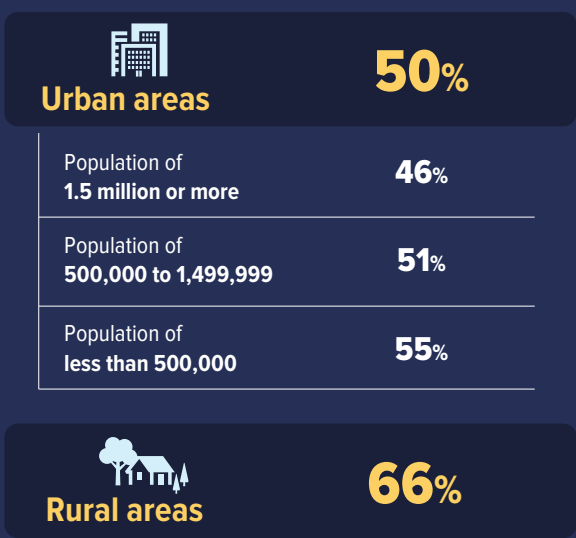

The older a person is, the more likely they are to trust their neighbours

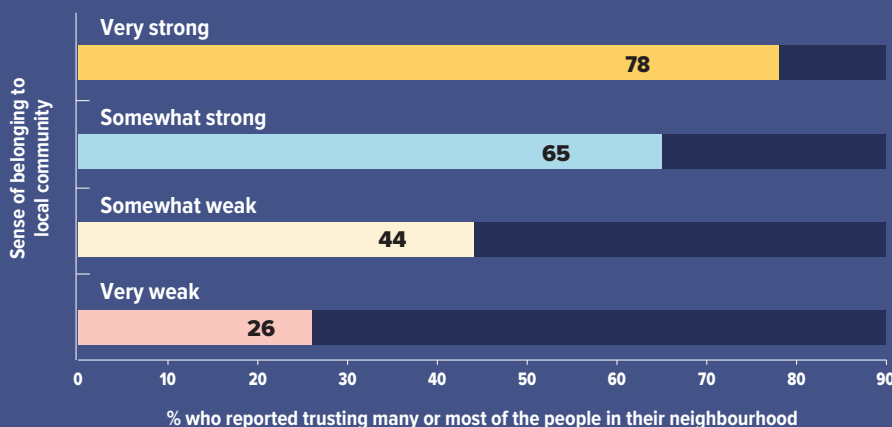

Urbanites, especially those in large cities, are less likely to trust their neighbours

Percentage who reported trusting many or most of the people in their neighbourhood

Those with a strong sense of belonging to their community are more likely to trust their neighbours

People who trust their neighbours have higher life satisfaction³

1. The response categories included "Most of the people," "Many of the people," "A few of the people" and "Nobody."
 2. The data reflect the responses of the population 15 years and older in Canada's 10 provinces.
 3. Survey respondents were asked, "Using a scale of 0 to 10, where 0 means "Very dissatisfied" and 10 means "Very satisfied," how do you feel about your life as a whole right now?"
